

41

Concepts in Motion

Religion and Race in the Political Oratory of
Abraham Lincoln,
John F. Kennedy and
Barack Obama

Daniela Hamann

WWU

Atlantische
Akademie

Atlantische Texte

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
1. Introduction	1
2. The Concept of Race and the Concept of Religion. Bill of Rights and the Constitution. American Civil Race and American Civil Religion	18
3. Abraham Lincoln	32
3.1. Religion	32
3.2. Abraham Lincoln’s Religious Rhetoric	37
3.2.1. Senate/Campaign Speeches	42
3.2.2. Presidential Addresses and Proclamations	46
3.2.3. Conclusion	63
3.3. Abraham Lincoln on Race and Slavery	65
3.3.1. Recent Scholarly Views about Abraham Lincoln	66
3.3.2. Lincoln and His Private Thoughts	73
3.3.3. Senate/Campaign Speeches	78
3.3.4. Presidential Speeches	93
3.3.5. Conclusion	96
4. John F. Kennedy	100
4.1. Catholics in the United States	107
4.2. John F. Kennedy and Religion	109
4.2.1. Catholicism and the Campaign	110
4.2.2. Senate/Campaign Speeches	113
4.2.3. Presidential Speeches	126
4.2.3. Conclusion	143

4.3.	John F. Kennedy and Race	145
4.3.1.	A Brief History of the Irish “Race” in the U.S.	146
4.3.2.	Race in the Campaign	147
4.3.3.	The Race Issue in Kennedy’s Presidential Rhetoric	157
4.3.4.	Conclusion	169
5.	Barack Obama	172
5.1.	Barack Obama’s Political Challenges	172
5.2.	Barack Obama’s Religious Rhetoric	176
5.2.1.	Religion in the Political Landscape of the U.S. in the Twenty-First Century	176
5.2.2.	Barack Obama and Religion	178
5.2.3.	Senate/Campaign Speeches	181
5.2.4.	Presidential Speeches	196
5.2.5.	Conclusion	210
5.3.	Barack Obama’s First Inaugural Address	213
5.4.	Barack Obama and Race	219
5.4.1.	Obama and Race in Twenty-First-Century America	219
5.4.2.	Senate/Campaign Speeches	223
5.4.3.	Presidential Speeches	236
5.4.4.	Conclusion	249
6.	Conclusion and Outlook	251
7.	Bibliography	256